2. ML estimate

Model output: 100.0% (uncalibrated). Model tier: High.

Available (uncalibrated)

This estimates future promotional disengagement. It is not individual model accuracy, proof of psychological fatigue, or shopping churn.

No feature attribution for KNN/prior baseline; observed evidence is separate

3. Sending-policy decisions

Policy tier: High. Combines the ML estimate with behavioral rules and explicit preferences.

Category relevance budget: two weekly slots per eligible promotional category (0); tier and explicit caps may reduce this further.

Category	Decision	Reason
Order Updates	Continued	Only from an order lifecycle event
Offers & Sales	Paused	High policy risk: promotional suppression; no recovery probes
New Arrivals	Paused	High policy risk: promotional suppression; no recovery probes
Price Drops	Paused	High policy risk: promotional suppression; no recovery probes

Suggested next action (advice): Pause promotions. This recommendation does not send a message.

Limitations

All customers, notifications, interactions and training data are synthetic.

Viewing durations and response timing are simulated, not measured.

Model probabilities are uncalibrated. Low interaction does not establish fatigue or shopping churn.

A planned reduction is not evidence of improved retention or wellbeing. Suppressed messages have no imagined responses.

This report captures a snapshot. Later interactions or preferences can change the plan.
